

Five Feet Apart

Am I the only one who is captivated ^{by the thought of} ~~to~~ rewinding and relieving from the constant bombardment of stress with a movie which is both heart-wrenching and ~~with a thought-provoking message which assist us to lift the weight of the world on our shoulders?~~ Released in 2019, Five Feet Apart is an intensely heart-rending movie directed by ~~the~~ Justin Baldoni. The movie - based on Rachael Lippincott's novel - was set in New Orleans, USA. It was starred by ~~the~~ Cole Sprouse as the lackadaisical William Newman and Haley Lu Richardson as the optimistic Stella Grant.

The plot involves a teenager, Stella, who spends most of her life in the hospital. Despite her breathing struggles and being a cystic Fibrosis patient - a condition which causes severe damage to the lungs - she is portrayed to be extraordinarily ebullient ^{person with} and a shining light of optimism which is downright life-affirming. During one of her frequent visits to the hospital nursery to watch the newborn babies, Stella unexpectedly crosses ~~paths~~ ^{form} with William, a more cynical CF patient who has B capacity ~~from~~ - so ~~a~~ deadly that sufferers couldn't get a lung transplant unlike Stella. They then develop a firm connection which later gets profoundly strong.

Are they going to survive? Will their relationship last? These questions kept me on the edge of my seat ^{with} immense jittery throughout the whole film. The scenes of Stella and William are downright excruciating yet chucklesome. But if you are a romantic movie fanatic, this melancholic film will no doubt make the faint-hearted reach for tissues. The awe-inspiring script, comprised of dialogues and quotes are so inspiring that no one would hesitate to get out of their comfort zones and to be contented with what we already have ^{whilst} ~~moreover~~ never ~~to~~ taking life for granted. In addition, the heart-soothing and euphorious soundtrack along with the absolutely fervent dialogues are sure to make you misty-eyed. Besides, I loved the way acting seemed so realistic, even the most buoyant and contented person could feel the unbearable agony.

I highly recommend ~~Five Feet Apart~~, especially if you are keen on romantic movies with an intense message. It is a poignant, gripping and memorable movie - and well worth ^{two} a few hours of your time.
